Is it not necessary to lay down some rules or instructions somewhat similar to those laid down in regard to the Indigenous Hospitals

Hospital at Nagpore? In other words, is not some sort of supervision by a Medical officer of the State necessary? If it is, should not the Senior Surgeon be consulted and the order revised?

I have no objection to consult the Senior Surgeon and to add the instructions. Please do so. I do not like the name of Indigenous Hospitals. Why not call them Hindu Vidyasalas.

In this office Docket no 2275 & 4, 31.11.96 & the 12th Dec 1903 the Senior Surgeon was asked to state whether some sort of supervision, over such institutions, by a Medical Officer of the State is not necessary, and, if so, to submit draft of instructions which he would propose on the lines laid down in regard to the Indigenous Hospital at Nagpore.

In reply he states in his letter No 3361 d 5. 12. 03, as follows.

Lieutenant-Surgeon

The Assistant Surgeons should be in a position to judge whether "the medicines are properly prepared and dispensed" & absolutely necessary that the Pandit should be obliged to conform to the conditions of para 2 in my letter No 361 of 5th Jan 1904. They are at present entirely ignorant of how Pandits drugs are prepared and dispensed - & should probably be put them in supervision of persons of which they are ignorant, and which which they would have every opportunity of enquiring. Then I don't think there would be much use in expecting the Assistant Surgeons reporting the result of their observations to the President - for what would be the use the President having to judge these matters? We hope you don't think I am prejudiced against the Pandits - for I am not I simply don't want to put Officers of the Dept in a position in which through no fault of theirs they do something when in reality they will make to do nothing -
